We are The IASME Consortium and we make businesses more secure

Dr Emma Philpott
CEO of IASME Consortium

The IASME Consortium is the leading Accreditation Body for the government-backed Cyber Essentials certification scheme and the award-winning IASME Governance standard.

We have security in our bones. In fact, we were involved right at the start in developing Cyber Essentials.

IASME was established in 2010 to encourage SMEs to adopt our award-winning IASME Governance standard. And we champion the interests of SMEs wherever we go.

We have a network of over eighty Certification Bodies, who are companies that can help you become more secure and certify you to our standards.

We have over eighty Certification Bodies who can make your organisation more secure

Did you know?

We are based in Malvern's "Cyber Valley" with many other of the UK's top Cyber Security companies

The IASME Consortium ensures the quality of our assessment schemes through strict training and security requirements for our Certification Bodies.

We carry out regular quality control and operate an independent expert panel to guide the direction of our standards.

We recently introduced a set of data protection requirements into our IASME Governance standard to reflect the new EU General Data

Protection Regulation (GDPR) and our assessors are now trained in GDPR.

We believe basic cyber security is an essential requirement for the supply chain of all organisations.

Our standards allow companies of all sizes to show their security status. We have developed a supply chain assessment option for large organisations to push Cyber Essentials and IASME into their supply chains.
